

TX GOP 12/12

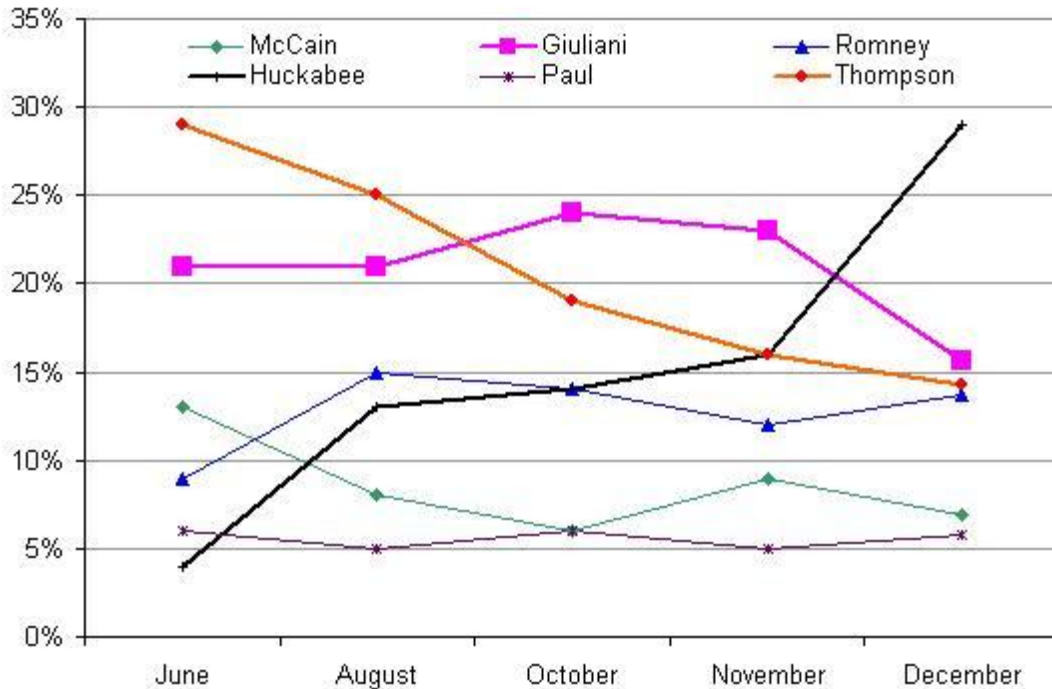

Thursday, 13 December 2007

Whether caused by questions about Rudy Giuliani's expenses as Mayor or Mike Huckabee having a good debate and striking gold with the Redeem the Vote email list, things are changing fast in the GOP presidential primary. Huckabee shot up to 29%, matching Fred Thompson's high point from June, while Thompson has fallen to half his previous support. Last month, the two were tied for second. Giuliani has the largest drop and falls to a statistical three-way tie with Romney and Thompson, though he still maintains a slight lead. The issue questions from last month were repeated and comparing the two sets, it would appear that some of Giuliani's more moderate voters have shifted to Huckabee. The profile of Giuliani's supporters is more conservative this month, while the profile of Huckabee's supporters is more moderate than last month, which is in line with moderates shifting support.

- Huckabee 29% (16%)
- Giuliani 16% (23%)
- Thompson 14% (16%)
- Romney 14% (12%)
- McCain 7% (9%)
- Paul 6% (5%)
- Tancredo 3% (3%)
- Hunter 2% (3%)
- Keyes 0% (1%)
- Undecided 9% (11%)

535 past TX GOP Primary voters polled 12/12, MoE 4.2%

Graph after break

Last Updated (Friday, 11 January 2008)

Close Window