April 2, 2007 - Giuliani Widens Lead Over Clinton In Florida, Quinnipiac University Poll Finds; Gore Squeaks Past Obama In Democratic Primary

Former New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani has opened double-digit leads over top 2008 Democratic presidential contenders in Florida, beating either New York Sen. Hillary Clinton or former Sen. John Edwards 50 - 40 percent, and topping Illinois Sen. Barack Obama 52 - 36 percent, according to a Quinnipiac University poll released today.

This compares to a 47 - 42 percent Giuliani lead over Sen. Clinton in a March 7 survey by the independent Quinnipiac (KWIN-uh-pe-ack) University.

Arizona Sen. John McCain gets 45 percent to Clinton's 44 percent. Edwards edges McCain 43 - 41 percent while McCain tops Obama 45 - 39 percent.

In this latest survey, Giuliani leads the Republican pack with 35 percent, followed by Arizona Sen. John McCain with 15 percent, former House Speaker Newt Gingrich at 11 percent, former U.S. Senator and actor Fred Thompson at 6 percent and former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney at 5 percent.

With 36 percent, Clinton keeps her lead among Democrats. But former Vice President Al Gore has moved up to 16 percent, followed by Sen. Obama at 13 percent and Edwards at 11 percent.

"There is an old saying in Dixie that the further south you get the further north it looks, so perhaps that explains former Mayor Giuliani's strength. Whatever the reason, he is clearly the front-runner in Florida - home to relocated New Yorkers," said Peter Brown, assistant director of the Quinnipiac University Polling Institute.

All three Democrats defeat Romney, but by much smaller margins than in past Quinnipiac University polls. Romney, however, who has been actively campaigning for some time and has raised an estimated $15 million-plus, finds himself for the third consecutive recent Quinnipiac University poll (Ohio and Pennsylvania are the others) tied or trailing Thompson, whose supporters are pressing him to run.

"Obviously there is some support for a Thompson candidacy should he run. He is the least known of the candidates, but among the Republicans and independents who know him, he is well thought of," said Brown. "And if Gore is seriously thinking about running, his continued strength among party activists is encouraging news."

Giuliani's lead over McCain among GOP primary voters has gone from 6 points February 7, to 20 points March 7, with 20 points today.

Giuliani also has the most impressive showing when voters rate the candidates favorably or unfavorably, 59 - 19 percent. Favorability ratings for other candidates are:

- 48 - 25 percent for McCain;
- 47 - 45 percent for Clinton;
- 42 - 20 percent for Obama;
- 50 - 25 percent for Edwards;
- 65 percent haven't heard enough about Romney to form an opinion;
- 74 percent haven't heard enough about Thompson.

"While Sen. Obama has been narrowing the Democratic primary gap with Sen. Clinton in Pennsylvania and Ohio, he is far behind her in Florida. Former Vice President Gore, meanwhile, is moving toward center stage, even as he remains coy about his candidacy," said Brown.

From March 21 - 27, Quinnipiac University surveyed 1,061 Florida voters, with a margin of error of +/- 3 percentage points. The survey includes 445 Republicans with a margin of error of +/- 4.7 percentage points, and 405 Democrats, with a margin of error of +/- 4.9 percentage points.

The Quinnipiac University Poll, directed by Douglas Schwartz, Ph.D., conducts public opinion surveys in Florida, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Ohio and the nation as a public service and for research. For more data -- <http://www.quinnipiac.edu/x271.xml>, or call (203) 582-5201.
