

Vermont Democratic Presidential Primary

Vermont: Obama 57% Clinton 33%

Monday, February 25, 2008

In Vermont, Barack Obama holds a commanding twenty-four point lead over Hillary Clinton with just over a week to go before the Primary. The latest Rasmussen Reports telephone survey shows Obama with 57% of the vote while Clinton attracts only 33%.

In other states that will vote on March 4, Clinton currently leads in Rhode Island and Ohio while Texas is very competitive.

In Vermont, Obama is viewed favorably by 87% of Likely Democratic Primary Voters while Clinton is viewed favorably by 79%.

Eighty-nine percent (89%) believe that Obama is at least somewhat likely to win the White House if nominated. That figure includes an amazing 61% who believe he is Very Likely to win the general election.

For Clinton, 74% believe she would be at least somewhat likely to win. Thirty-six percent (36%) believe she would be Very Likely to win as the Democratic nominee.

The economy is seen as the top issue by 40% of Likely Primary Voters. Twenty-six percent (26%) name the War in Iraq as their highest priority.

Survey of 1,013 Likely Democratic Primary Voters February 24, 2008

Vermont Democratic Primary

Barack Obama	57%
Hillary Clinton	33%
Not Sure	10%