

Monday, January 14, 2008

New Poll: Democratic race in Nevada a dead heat

A new poll by the Reno Gazette-Journal shows a neck-and-neck three-way race among Democrats for Saturday's caucus. On the Republican side, U.S. Sen. John McCain has taken his first lead in Nevada of the election season, and Mitt Romney, who has been working Nevada harder than any other Republican, is trailing in fourth place.

A look at the top line results (more will be posted later this morning):

Barack Obama: 32 percent

Hillary Clinton: 30 percent

John Edwards: 27 percent

John McCain: 22 percent

Rudy Giuliani: 18 percent

Mike Huckabee: 16 percent

Mitt Romney: 15 percent

Fred Thompson: 11 percent

Ron Paul: 6 percent

Duncan Hunter: 1 percent

The poll was conducted Jan. 11 to Jan. 13 , with samples of 500 likely Democratic caucus-goers and 500 likely Republican caucus-goers statewide by Maryland-based Research 2000. The margin of error is 4.5 percent.

posted by Anjeanette Damon at 7:06 AM